At the expiration of the said four months, he and the said guard went home on furlough & stayed about four or five months, when they were again called out, and he this deponent commanded as Lieutenant, in guarding up and down the Hudson River—at Peekskill—White Plains—in Connecticut, & on the sea shore, having a lieutenant's Guard under his command, of twelve men.

He was in a number of skirmishes with the Cow Boys—and he remained in service as Lieutenant as aforesaid, from the time of his enlistment, in 1781, until the army was disbanded in 1783, being a continued service as Lieutenant of two years & several months—and that he was honorably discharged from the service in Dutchess County, N.Y.

And he says that his commission as Lieutenant & all his other papers, were destroyed by fire, when his home at Williamstown, N.Y. was burnt a number of years ago.
