She saw him once at Salem in Westchester County with a number of Continental teams under his care with supplies as was said for the Continental Army after their marriage he was from home a principal part of the time and as she understood was employed as a Comisary in the American Service has understood from her said Husband and others that he was in an engagement with the Tory enemy at North Caste [Castle] in Westches[ter] but cannot tell the particulars nor precise time has also heard him tell of an engagement which he was in with the British at Horseneck in the State of Connecticut but does not remember the time.

Has also heard him say he was in the American Army when they were driven out of New York City he had his arm broken in the retreat which was always after Considerable Crooked in consequence of the same.
